Rails' End Gallery seeks financial support

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

If the Rails' End Gallery can find enough money to get through the coming winter, staff and board members are confident that the plans they have in place will put the Haliburton landmark on much firmer financial footings in the future.

As it stands now, the gallery's bank account will be empty by the end of October, leaving it with no money to pay its operating bills over the winter.

However, if funding for those winter months can be secured, next March the gallery could likely get $10,000 in Trillium Foundation grants and set in place several new marketing initiatives. It's also hoping that a Ken Danby show and reception with the artist next July will be a major fundraiser.

The Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts, which manages the gallery in Haliburton's historic train station, will be approaching county council as well as various service clubs this month to ask for assistance.

Over the past year or so, the Guild has lost two major sources of funding. It no longer gets a $6,000 grant (which used to be larger) from the Ontario Arts Council, nor does it host the August art auction, which used to bring in $12,000. (The auction is now a fundraiser for the Friends of Sir Sandford Fleming College.)

As well, when the Guild's summer show and sale was held at JDHES and the arena,

New gem and mineral club to form

INTERESTED IN JOINING a new gem and mineral club? Mike Snider in Wilberforce says the club would do such things as gem and rock collecting, lapidary, hold field trips and tours and host special presentations. For details, please call him at 448-1706.

The Haliburton County Learning Program is offering a series of six cooking lessons during October and November. Working in small groups, participants will test their math and learn about healthy eating and basic cooking techniques. The classes will be held in Haliburton. Please call 457-3430 to enroll.

Municipal governments take note: We received an interesting press release from Eldon Township (which includes the village of Kirkfield). In an attempt to lure residential development, council will waive its development charges. "While municipalities across Ontario continue to increase development charges, Eldon Township refuses to penalize new home construction... In an effort to further assist residential development, Eldon has also embarked on a maximum 30-day approval process... With over 80 severed lots available, Eldon Township welcomes individuals and builders." Council estimates the decision will save builders $2,000.

From Oct. 14 to 17, the Toronto Ski and Snowboard Show returns to the Automotive Building at Exhibition Place. There will be 200 winter sport exhibitors offering the latest in equipment, fashion, technical advice and resort destinations, plus entertaining special features and the ski swap. For more information contact Karl Eichner at 416-447-2265 or e-mail keichner@istar.ca.

Maureen McTeer will be speaking about such topics as reproductive and genetic technologies, organ transplants, embryo research, cloning, bio-engineered foods and assisted suicide and euthanasia as part of Cambridge Street United Church's Stinson Lecture series. Her theme on Sunday, Oct. 17 at 10:30 a.m. at the Lindsay church is "Creating Life: A Tool for Discrimination or Greater Protection?" At 7 that night, she will speak at the Frost Campus in Lindsay on "Commercialization of Life: Business as Usual or a New Canadian Way?" All are welcome and there's no admission charge. For details call Grace King at 705-324-7620.

The Kawartha Jazz Society has a great fall line-up. On Sunday, October 17 at Market Hall on George Street, Peterborough, it's a double bill of Time Warp (Al Henderson, bass; Barry Elmes, drums; Mike Murley, tenor sax; Kevin Turcotte, trumpet) and DEW East (Alex Dean, saxophones, bass clarinet and flute; Steve Wallace, bass; and Barry Elmes, drums.) Then on Sunday, November 21 at Show-place, it's Rob McConnell and his wonderful Boss Brass, likely including Moe Koffman, Rick Wilkins and Ed Bickert (and it's to be hoped, trumpeter John McLeod whose mother Clare lives in Blairhampton.) Then, on January 23, two long-time favourites, Pat Labarbera and Don Thompson will wrap up the 10th anniversary season with their quartets. Tickets available in advance by phoning Craig Paterson at 705-745-1870 or Ken Brown at 705-743-8750 evenings.

After spending the winter in the United States, Ian Brohm and his musical partner Bernard Warren are back in Ontario - for a while at least. They're planning a concert on October 23 at the Roxy Theatre in Owen Sound, featuring cover tunes and a few of their own songs. They'll be accompanied by an "amazing" band called JR Country. Over the winter, Brohm and Warren worked with country greats Cal Smith and Bill Anderson in Michigan. Reserved seating tickets, $10, can be purchased by calling toll-free 1-888-446-7699.

All the newest snowmobiles and accessories will be on display at the 12th Annual Supertrax International Snowmobiler's Show at the Toronto International Centre Oct. 22, 23 and 24. There will be 750 booths, representation from the major snowmobile manufacturers and information on all the scenic trails and destinations. The show is at 6900 Airport Road in Mississauga. Tanker truck driver only now safely on road to rehabilitation

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The driver of the tanker truck which exploded into flames after going into the ditch near Essonville Line is only now safely on the road to recovery.

"He's improving slowly and steadily," Steve McCall's father Earl said last Tuesday. "They've moved him out of Intensive Care onto the floor. He's learning how to walk again."

"It's a good thing he's as young as he is and as strong as he is."

Thirty-seven year old Steve suffered burns to 23% of his body while escaping from his burning truck.

On the afternoon of August 30 he was hauling 48,000 litres of gas on Hwy 121 when he apparently swerved to avoid two bears. His truck went into the east ditch and exploded. It's not known when or how McCall was able to get out.

"He remembers the accident but he hasn't discussed it yet and we're not pushing it," says Earl McCall, who's managing the family's dairy farm in Omeme while his wife Linda stays close to their son at the Hamilton hospital's burn unit.

Just after the accident, Steve McCall was able to talk to passersby, leading people to think his injuries were not serious. That's what his parents thought, too, when they arrived at Hamilton expecting to soon take Steve home with them.

"What a shock," says Earl McCall, who still gets emotional over the memory. "We weren't prepared for what we were going to see and I hope we never see it again."

The most serious burns were on Steve's arms, hands and back, but what made recovery so difficult were the burns to his mouth and throat. "His airway was closing up fast," Earl says of the dangerous time just after the accident.

Putting him on life support, doctors kept Steve unconscious as a way of helping the body heal.

"It's unbelievable they can keep a person out for that long and save him from excruciating pain."

Two weeks ago, doctors tried to take Steve off the respirator for the first time. "We almost lost him," his father says. Steve vomited and the vomit went into his lungs.

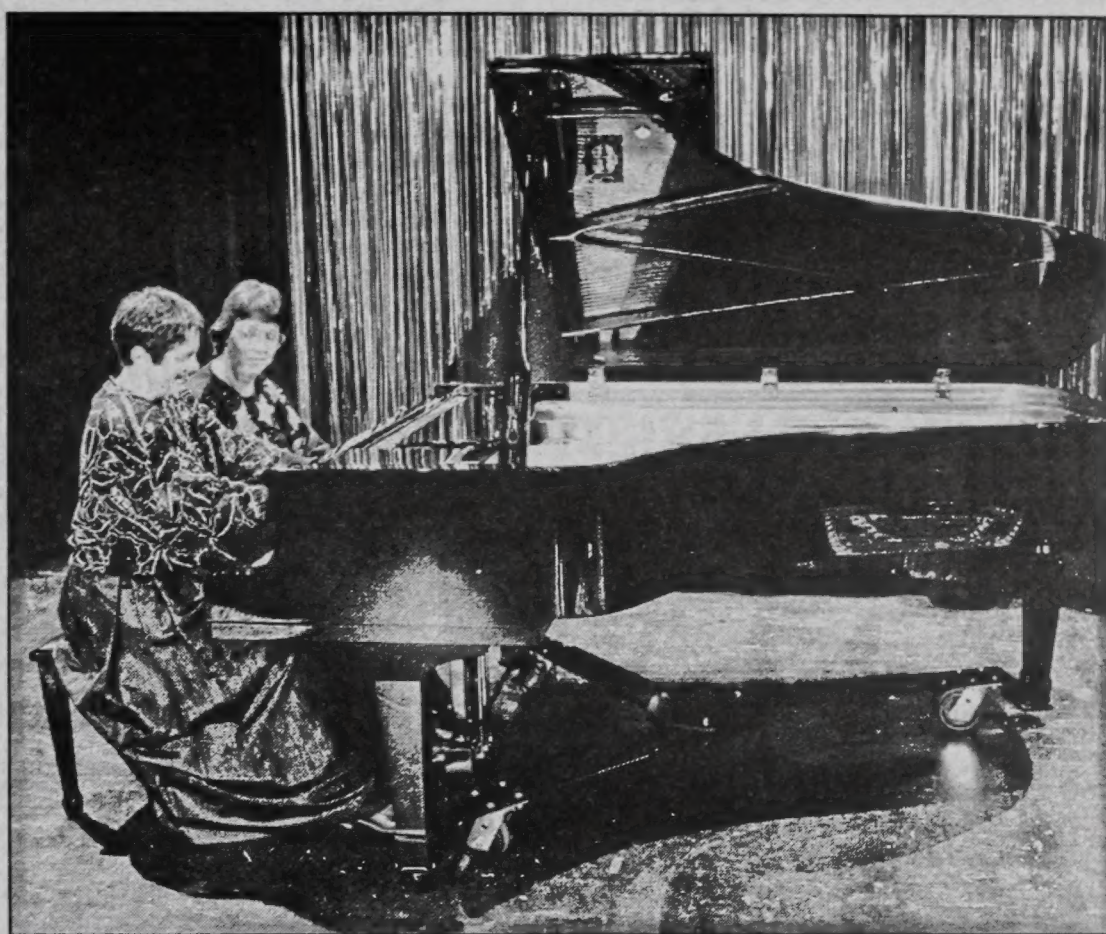

"It's a miracle he's still alive. We're thankful to have him."

The McCalls say the staff at Hamilton have been "wonderful." All the skin grafts are done and physiotherapy is helping Steve regain the muscle tone he lost during his weeks in ICU.

He is also able to talk again, although his voice is barely more than a whisper.

It's a miracle Steve's still alive. We're thankful to have him.

LOVE NOTES:

On four evenings, audiences delighted in the sound of the new Yamaha grand piano at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion. Although most of the money for the professional quality piano had been donated by sponsors, the performances helped raise the balance. Local pianists Lauren McInnes and Melissa Stephenson, who has been named Highlander of the Year, made the audience appreciate the piano's quality with their evocative duet, above. Debra Dart and Daryl Dobson were two of eight actors who rounded out the rest of the evening's performance with readings from Love Letters.

Negotiations continue between Minden, Lutterworth and Snowdon

NANCY MCGINN

Staff Reporter

Councillors and clerks from Snowdon, Lutterworth and Anson Hindon and Minden met Wednesday as part of the amalgamation process.

County CAO Les Shepherd chaired the meeting, which included a representative from the Ministry of Municipal Affairs.

There had been concern expressed by council members that if their submitted proposal was not approved by the Minister of Municipal Affairs, then all their work would be for nothing and a government official would then come in and take over the amalgamation process negating.

Shepherd reassured the council members that if their submitted proposal was done according to the legislative guidelines, then there would be no problems with its acceptance. "We set the table," Shepherd said, adding that as a next step, "we need to define the boundaries for this report."

The time frame for the submission of the restructuring proposal was confirmed as the end of November 1999 with the effective date January 1, 2001. An extension has been requested for the proposal submission, but it was hoped to have it done by the deadline.

AHM clerk Tammy McKelvey will be the Returning Officer for elections for the new municipality.

There was much discussion about staffing issues.

One council member suggested that none of the politicians knew what their staff do, and it was requested that they put together staffing recommendations and job descriptions and present them at the next meeting.

It was decided to hire a consultant to deal with any staffing issues, after the clerks and council held a meeting.

Any cash reserves that municipalities may have in entering into amalgamation would be spent in the area in which it was collected.

A name for the newly amalgamated townships must be chosen, and it was decided that a method which involved public input was needed.

There was a suggestion that ballots could be inserted into the tax bills. The actual name did not have to be chosen by the deadline, but the process by which a name is chosen had to be identified by November.

It was said that the newly elected council will ultimately be responsible for a majority of the decisions following amalgamation.

The next meeting is Oct. 27 at 5:30 p.m. in the county chambers.

Teachers' negotiators agree to meet with board

The provincial takeover negotiating team for the Trillium Lakelands Elementary Teachers' Federation and the Trillium Lakelands District School Board have agreed to resume negotiations on October 28 and 29.

In a union press release, John McClelland, president of the Trillium Lakelands Elementary Teachers' Federation says "every effort will be made at these meetings to achieve a fair settlement without taking strike action." He says, "it is way past time for the Trillium Lakelands District School Board to get in step with all other boards in the province and negotiate a fair settlement with elementary teachers."

Last week members of the local federation overwhelmingly supported strike action by a 93.9% majority.

Marketing plan, special shows won't be able to generate revenue until next year the Guild received 25% of all sales. Now that the sale's been moved to Head Lake Park, its only proceeds are from the booth rentals.

It costs $120,000 a year to operate the Rails' End Gallery. The building is owned by the municipality of Dysart et al, but the Guild pays for all operating costs such as taxes, insurance, heat and hydro. With insufficient insulation, the building is expensive to heat, which is one of the reasons why the gallery will close to the public on October 15. It will still be open for Guild gatherings, special events and twice monthly concerts with the Haliburton County Folk Society. (The Society will keep ticket revenue while the Guild will sell refreshments and finger foods as a fundraiser.)

Like many other non-profit organizations, the Guild faces a lot of competition for fundraising dollars.

"There are lots of people looking for money," says curator Laurie Carmount, adding that the Trillium Foundation won't be able to provide a grant if the Guild is in a deficit. This means the Guild must be able to have money before it can apply for certain grants.

She and the Guild's board and supporters have come up with an extensive fundraising and marketing plan which she says holds much promise. Many projects are geared to improving the gallery's profile - she's amazed at how many people don't know what it has to offer - and approaching corporations for show and gallery sponsorships. There's a vast, untapped market out there, she says, but it will require time and effort to negotiate the proper channels.

Getting more people into the gallery will help in three ways: once there, people are more likely to return; sales from shows would increase; and sales in the Guild shop, a major source of revenue for the Guild and its member artists, would increase.

"A lot of people don't know who we are and what we do," says Carmount, who's drafted a comprehensive plan that would include:

- improved signage on the roads to let passersby know about the gallery
- improved signage at the gallery to let people know about shows
- new brochures incorporating a new look and updated logo design
- creating a presence on the internet, especially special sites for arts groups
- reaching out to School of Fine Arts students and cottage associations and undertaking more joint marketing initiatives with the SFA

- curating shows that have appeal to certain groups, such as the Flying High show for those who might be involved with Ducks Unlimited and various water fowl groups

- rotating stock in the gallery shop in conjunction with more active marketing of the shop as a shopping destination

- and compiling a Welcome Wagon package outlining the Guild's activities, to be distributed to new property owners by real estate agents.

Perhaps high school students with an interest in business or graphics could fulfill part of the community volunteer requirements by helping the Guild with these projects, Carmount says.

Some fundraising ideas include

- a special Hallowe'en event at the gallery on October 31 in conjunction with the Highlands Little Theatre. Local thespians would dress up as ghostly spectres and interact with young visitors to the gallery
- an art/antique appraisal night
- art rental
- kite festival
- screever festival (screevers were chalk drawers in the early 1800s)
- garden tour
- bed and breakfast tour
- theme dinner
- and a Guild cookbook.

Four highest bids to be considered in Martin lumber auction

Gordons Real Estate Auction Company.

In 1997 the property was purchased by a consortium of local businessmen, led by Ken Sibbald, who wanted to develop the land and former Martin Lumber corporate headquarters into a time share resort, complete with a hotel, restaurant and recreation facilities.

Billed as a retreat "designed for people who like luxury in the wilderness", the developers named the proposed project Algonquin South Gate Resort, and set about organizing the plan after receiving the go-ahead from the Ontario Municipal Board.

There had been objections by residential organizations worried about increased boat traffic on Benoit Lake, but the developers modified their plans and the objections were dropped.

Phase one of the proposed 92 unit resort was to be underway in the first half of 1998, but according to a October 5, 1999 press release signed by Gary Martin, Acting President of the proposed resort, "negotiations with a third party investor were dashed at the last moment leaving the directors with insufficient resources to continue."

"It is hoped that the auction will attract bidders from near and far and that the final outcome will be the speedy development of the properties in a way that will be to the benefit of the North Hastings and East Haliburton communities."

Paul Switzer of Gordons Auction Company is co-ordinating the project and on December 7, faxed bids will be accepted at his Kingston office. Only the top four bids will be considered by the present property owners and their bank.

There are four packages of land that can be sold either together or individually as each property is deeded separately. They include:

- 41 acres of land containing the 26,000 square foot former office of Martin Lumber
- the adjoining 11 acres on Benoit Lake which includes 1,000 feet of water frontage
- 747 acres of recreational land
- 179 acres of land abutting Algonquin Park, containing the air strip and hangar.

Switzer says his firm has done extensive advertising to target markets with a detailed prospectus. He says that the current owners would like to find a "corporate player" with the resources to develop the property to provide jobs and increase the prosperity of the area.

There will be regular viewing times on Sundays and Mondays but if you would like some privacy as you ponder your potential purchase, that can be arranged through the auctioneer by appointment only.

Big hockey tournament gets bumped from Dysart arena

NANCY MCGINN

Staff Reporter

Haliburton Hockey Haven will have to find a new venue for its Annual Highlands Classic Old Timers Hockey Tournament, formerly called the Coby Islanders.

After 13 years at the Dysart arena, the organization has had to scramble to find a replacement arena for next spring's event because the arena has been booked for another group.

Hockey Haven had assumed that the first week in March would be booked for them by the arena's management, as it has been automatically done for the past 13 years.

However, the tournament was bumped from its traditional spot by a figure skating event.

"We are a little disappointed, needless to say," says the president of Hockey Haven, Pat Russell.

Russell found out about the change in events while he was putting up posters to advertise the tournament. Notification of the tournament had also been sent out to all the players on the mailing list, showing the Haliburton arena as one of the assumed venue for the games.

Because there are too many teams to accommodate all the games at one arena, some games will, as usual, be played at the Minden arena.

Russell says that Wilberforce might be a consideration for the second rink, but is concerned about the distance between the two venues.

With as many as 32 teams of 15 players, in addition to their families and friends, Russell estimates that the event draws close to 1,000 people for two days of games that serve as the qualifier for the provincial championships.

Players and their families have traditionally stayed at local resorts, motels and rental accommodations.

Walt McKechnie of McKecks's Place in Haliburton says "it was a lack of communication on both parties' parts and it's too bad it couldn't be resolved. It's a great loss for the whole community and very frustrating."

Lou Dummitt has been the manager of the Haliburton arena for two years. He says Hockey Haven was notified on several occasions by phone and in person to confirm their dates with the arena.

Dummitt says "there are procedures in place that have to be followed. They procrastinated and lost the dates."

"It doesn't state anywhere that they have the first weekend of March."

School of Fine Arts sets record

■ Enrolment tops 3,000 for popular Haliburton summer courses

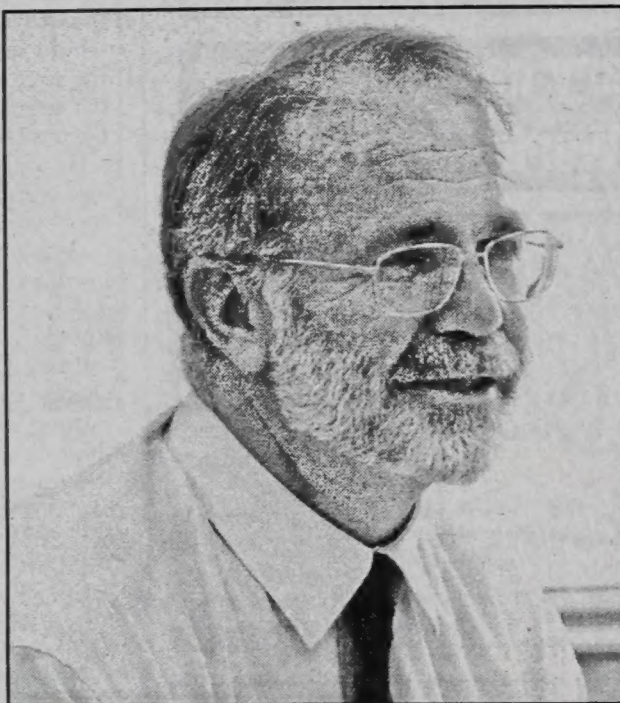

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The following are brief reports of some of the items discussed at Wednesday's meeting of Sir Sandford Fleming College's board of governors at the Haliburton campus.

With an enrollment increase of seven percent, the School of Fine Arts once again set a new record for itself, attracting almost 3,100 registrants.

There was positive reaction to several new initiatives, reported campus director Barb Bolin, including an expressive arts certificate and a three course to teach teachers how to teach art in accordance with the new curriculum. Its hoped this type of program can expand in co-operation with the new Ontario College of Teachers.

Tuesday night lectures attracted an average of 100 people, students and people from the community.

"Of course," Bolin said, "we always have the challenge of space." Courses are held at various facilities throughout the village and there is hope approval will be given by the provincial government for a new campus at Glebe Park.

"We're really looking forward to a new campus with more space and more appropriate space," she said.

Course cancelled

Although it turned out there would have been enough enrollment to justify holding the Drawing and Design course, back in July the decision had to be made to cancel the new program for this fall at least.

"Unfortunately, we could have run it but those are the decisions we had to make at the time," said campus director Barb Bolin.

The intensive certificate program, which is now being advertised for next autumn, offers four credits in drawing, four in painting, two in art history, one for portfolio presentation, one for design, one for colour and one for sculpture.

The target market includes students who need a portfolio of work when applying to art schools. Negotiations are underway with Sheridan College and Queen's University to get the names of people who applied to their arts courses but were not successful because there are always more applications than spaces available.

Provincial affairs

College president Brian Desbiens met recently with David Lindsay, head of the Ontario Jobs Investment Board. "If they truly are interested in economic development, maybe they'll want to support what the college is doing," says Dr. Desbiens, who's also on the college system's Council of Regents.

In August, he met with the Minister of Training, Colleges and Education, Dianne Cunningham, focusing his comments on Fleming's capital submission.

The Council of Regents has been asked to provide direction on three Ministry areas of interest: leadership, structure and market focus.

Enrollment

Averaging out the enrollment at all campuses, Fleming's numbers are roughly the same as they were last year. Natural resources enrollment is up, while business is down. Fewer colleges are experiencing the large shifts in enrollment this year. However, colleges in the north are beginning to feel the adverse effects of more money being given to larger southern campuses, thus luring students away from the north. In Sault Ste. Marie, for instance, enrollment is down almost 13 percent.

"Many colleges are still struggling with deficits," Dr. Desbiens said. "The large colleges are getting richer, the smaller colleges are getting poorer or staying poor... It won't be long until it starts to affect us, too. If (funding is directed to urban centres), it will only continue to suck money from communities like this."

Tuition fees

Although student groups gave "solid arguments" in favour of a tuition freeze, Dr. Desbiens said it is impossible for Fleming to support such a request. A tuition freeze would leave the college too vulnerable to funding changes, he said, adding that the college will do what's possible to maintain current fees.

Few promises of more money are expected from the upcoming provincial Throne Speech.

Fundraising

Bolin praised the dedication of the Friends of Sir Sandford Fleming College, which raised $103,000 last year.

New appointment

Wendy Ladurantaye of the Haliburton campus was welcomed to the as a support staff observer. The appointment fills a vacancy for a term ending next August.

"We know you'll be a wonderful addition," said board president Sheilagh Fertile, comments echoed by Desbiens, who has taken one of Ladurantaye's stained glass courses.

Campus may be small college's impact big

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Its actual campus may be small, but Sir Sandford Fleming College is a big player when it comes to Haliburton County's economic and social wellbeing, the college's governors were told during the board's annual autumn pilgrimage to the Highlands.

Using "very conservative methods," it's estimated the School of Fine Arts alone contributes $1.5-million to the Haliburton economy, attracting 3,100 registrants for the collage of courses spread throughout the village over the summer.

Direct spending is $300,000 and it employs the equivalent of 24 full-time jobs or 100 summer jobs.

The year-round campus, in addition to the Employment Resource Centre which is managed by the college for the federal government, has an annual budget of $1.5-million and employs 12 full-time and three part-time staff members.

"We think the presence of the campus has a significant benefit to the economy," said college president Brian Desbiens. If the provincial government gives the go-ahead (and some of the money) to build a proposed new campus at Glebe Park, the college will be able to achieve even more.

However, he also echoed comments from campus director Barb Bolin, who said the college is about more than money.

"We're able to offer people something special here," she said at Wednesday's board meeting at the Haliburton campus.

There are 39 students currently registered in the eco-tourism management and adventure tourism program, with four or five expected to join in after Christmas.

The program's director, Al McPherson, "is a gem within the college," Bolin said. "His dedication is amazing."

In order to ensure students are getting the most up-to-date information, the program hires several part-time instructors. This makes it more difficult to co-ordinate - as does trying to fit a total of 75 people into the one small campus - but makes it more worthwhile for students.

Short-term computer programs are always being offered. The present course has 18 students.

The new artist blacksmithing course has 14 students, some from as far away as Baffin Islands. The intensive type of course, fitting two semesters' worth of work into one, is perfect for "people who want to learn a lot in a short time," Bolin said.

The college responds to the needs of the community, and the province, coming up with courses that often aren't available anywhere else.

A horticultural apprenticeship course begins soon to tap into the growing popularity of golf. Many students are from the northern half of the province, where they too have to figure out how to have lush greenways in a land with only an inch of topsoil.

After Christmas, the campus will offer the only English-language course in hardwood lumber inspection. Mill workers will also be in Haliburton to learn about kiln drying of wood.

Job Connect, for young people aged 16 to 24, helped link 67 participants with jobs in the community last year. Subsidies of $223,200 were paid to employers last year to provide job experience, generating $508,000 in wages. Thirty-nine of the participants found permanent placements. The program itself employs three full-time people.

A partnership with the Trillium Lakelands board of education has seen the academic upgrading program moving into the former Victoria Street School.

As the contracted service provider of the federal govern-

Haliburton campus principal Barb Bolin employment programs, Fleming dealt with 5,344 "people issues" last year. Human Resources and Development Canada gets "a good deal" from having Fleming run the office because of the college's contacts within the community.

Because of the college's responsiveness to the county's needs, the county is very responsive to the college's needs, Bolin said. "The community is very appreciative of the services we offer and is very supportive of seeing the college expand."

"You do so much for so many people," said board president Sheilagh Fertile, adding the campus has a large social impact in the county as well.

College president Brian Desbiens praised Bolin's leadership and the "tremendous staff" for making so many things possible.

"Barb's continually throwing ideas out and stimulating people," Dr. Desbiens said. "If it wasn't for her dynamism, it would be a less place."

A gallery in trouble

WHEN PEOPLE WHO ARE FAMILIAR with the Haliburton Highland Guild of Fine Arts read this week's story about its financial trouble, their first reaction will likely be heavily dosed with cynicism. For years, the Guild has been plagued with an endless variety of personality clashes, power struggles and wounded egos. This has created a lot of hurt feelings, frustration and shoulder shrugging as people who have been burned by the conflicts turn their backs on the organization.

Given that art is such a subjective thing, it's not really surprising to find this type of subjective conflict in an arts organization. No matter how people feel about some of the personalities involved with the Guild past or present, however, such feelings should not govern reactions to the Guild's plea for financial assistance.

editorial

martha perkins

The Guild was formed more than three decades ago because there was an intrinsic need for it. As the beauty of the area began to attract people who felt inspired to capture that beauty in art, it made sense to create an organization which not only brought the weavers and painters and stained glass artists and knitters together under one roof, but also provide them with a foundation from which their talents could grow. From the Guild grew the School of Fine Arts, which this year attracted more than 3,000 registrants, and from both grew the transformation of the abandoned train station in Haliburton into the Rails' End Gallery.

Today, the gallery is the primary financial drain on the Guild and one of the biggest sources of conflict. At first, the gallery was prided for its calibre of exhibits, bringing innovative artists to the small, out-of-the-way lakeside building. Recognizing these aspirations, the Ontario Arts Council provided funds to help pay the costs for artists' fees. But in focusing on art in general, instead of the artistic endeavours going within the county's borders, the gallery sometimes alienated Guild members. Many felt that since the Guild supports the gallery, the gallery's main focus should be support of Guild members. The gallery's emphasis therefore changed from hosting exhibits for art's sake to hosting exhibits for the members' sake. Sometimes that means one and the same thing; sometimes it doesn't.

While it's important to make Guild members feel at home at the gallery, it's equally important to remember that the gallery must be run like a business. Decisions must be made on what sells — "sells" in terms of attracting patrons who are likely to buy something on exhibit or "sells" in terms of what gallery patrons want to buy in the gallery shop. It's going to take the Guild some time to find the proper balance between satisfying its members' needs and satisfying its financial needs. This can be done, and it is imperative that the Guild be given the time to do it. Ambitious but not unrealistic plans are underway for next year, plans that will help the gallery pay for itself. But unless there is funding in place to open the gallery's doors next year, those plans will be for naught.

Haliburton village needs a public gallery; the Guild needs a home; the train station needs to be an integral part of village life. Yes there have been problems in the past, and there will likely be problems in the future, but it's time to keep our eye on the greater good. Let's not lose sight of how important that little gallery really is.

"Inflammatory statements" reinforce the old myths about HIV and AIDS

To the Editor:

In a letter last week, one of your readers cautioned that "considering an ad in The Echo for support group meetings for gay, lesbian, and bisexual teens, there is an increased concern for the spread of HIV and AIDS."

This statement indicates significant and dangerous misinformation about the means by which these viruses are transmitted, regardless of the person's sexual orientation. Meetings of gay, lesbian, and bisexual teens will not contribute any more to the spread of HIV and AIDS than will a meeting of another kind of support group, e.g. "parents of teens" or "widows and widowers", etc.

Myths about AIDS and HIV are most commonly increased by assuming that people who talk about and think about sex, or prevention of disease are automatically contributing to the spread of these viruses. In fact, these viruses are spread by some forms of sexual and other blood/body fluid contact.

By making such inflammatory statements, your reader feeds the fears that are precisely what keep lesbian, gay, and bisexual youth from being accepted and appreciated for who they are, creating the need for these support services. Suicide is an alternative chosen by many gay, lesbian, and bisexual youth, given the fear and rejection they are often faced with in the school, family, and community. To lead successful lives, all young people need the foundation of family, peer, and community support. Family Services offers groups that will increase the likelihood of a positive and productive life to which every youth is entitled.

Tax breaks for holidaying residents next

To the Editor:

That's one for the course in Logic. I'm referring to your item (Sept. 28, page 19) stating "Cottagers resent paying year-round taxes for property they use only part of the year."

Last time I looked, they were called property taxes, not user taxes. By the cottagers' logic, I should write Mayor Lastman asking him to return two weeks of taxes for the time my wife and I were touring British Columbia this summer — not using our house.

Or perhaps I can ask for a reduction in my monthly car lease because I drive it only 20 days of the month.

Or perhaps ...the absurdity goes on.

Does she or doesn't she?

AS I WAS WRITING THIS ARTICLE, I realized that I was probably opening a real can of worms but I thought, what the heck. I haven't been the target for awhile and, in all fairness to the rest of the family, it was my turn.

For those of you who grew up when I did, you won't have any trouble identifying the phrase in the title, "Does she or doesn't she?" only her hairdresser knows for sure!" It was from the good people at Clairol and it was a commercial showing a luscious head of hair swirling around in slo-mo. And yes, the hair was coloured - artificially. Well for those of you who know me and haven't yet figured it out, yes she does.

I first started colouring my hair when I was great with child (even I think that an understatement!) with my last baby, Sophie. Call it feeling hormonally challenged, call it a whim, as I sat in the chair looking at my dull brown hair I said with great gusto

"Let's do it red!". When all was said and done, I looked at myself in the mirror and immediately felt sassy (now isn't that a word) and loved it. It was a glorious colour of auburn, the colour I wish I had been born with, and it shone in the sun as my roly-poly body moved below it. If people were to be believed, the general consensus was positive too and I was pleased. Until I called my mother.

I feel the need to backtrack a moment here and tell you that my mother was adamantly opposed to colouring hair. She could afford to be self-righteous about it since she had the most gorgeous head of hair from birth. It was thick, black curly hair that turned a lovely salt and pepper with age and looked fabulous even through her days of chemotherapy. Mother's hair had never been permed, rinsed or dyed and she didn't really see the need for anyone to do those things either. Her best friend, Gwen, had started dying her hair years ago and had gone through a plethora of shades, not all of them good. Well after I had done the deed, I called my mom and told her. There was dead silence on the phone and then a somber, chilling voice said, "I told you never to dye your hair. Your hair was beautiful the way it was. You shouldn't have done that." I felt like I was talking to Joan Crawford all of the sudden. I said it looked great and I loved it and I was sure she would when she saw it. Again, the voice of ice spoke, "I won't like it. I warned you. I should cut you out of my will for this". Pretty harsh words just for some red hair. I didn't remember getting this big of a dressing down when I failed math. For whatever reason, she was really bent out of shape at the time, but did later forgive me although never did say she liked it, and no, I wasn't written out of the will.

That was all nearly seven years ago and I now, in an attempt to save some money, colour my hair at home. I say it like that because I don't do the colouring, my personal hairdresser with whom I live does it. Monsieur K is taller than moi and can get a better look at the roots. He usually does a pretty good job. He tut-tuts at me when I have let it go to long between colours and he admonishes me if I get the wrong colour - "I tell you to stick with 46! Why you go back and forth is beyond me? I try to tell you but you don't listen". Yeah, yeah, buddy, just put the stuff on and let's get it over with.

We were watching tv not long ago and Heather Locklear spun around in her little chair and said she uses Preference by Loreal. One of my kids said "Hey mom, she uses the same stuff you do"...I have to admit I smiled. I wonder if Heather would be as surprised as me to find us being compared, for whatever reason, in the same sentence. I wonder if she has a special pair of pyjamas she wears when she is dying her hair. I wonder if she cries out in anguish when the store is out of her colour. I wonder if Richie Sambora takes time from his rock star life to dye his wife's hair for her so she gets even coverage. Something tells me not. Oh well, I'm worth it, too.

With the Rails' End Gallery in the news this week, we dipped into our files to find this photo of the gallery in its previous incarnation as a train station. We're not sure when this photo, by H.D. Kalman, was taken, but the Rails' End recently celebrated its 20th birthday, so it must be sometime in the 1970s.

Just the facts? What does that teach?

A RADICAL PROPOSAL - less money for computers in school and more money for debating societies! Why not? At the moment we are in danger of using that amazing tool, the computer, to turn out a generation of pseudo-intellectuals. Students now have access to zillions of facts but even a million facts in an unquestioning mind do not add up to a knowledgeable person.

Too often we equate quantity of fact with quality of discernment. The comment often heard that the children of today are so much smarter than we were because they seem to know so much more, reflects that attitude.

Little children question everything. But somewhere along the way we lose our questioning instincts and thus our ability to find the fallacies in the promoters' presentations. It is a common adage that facts can be marshalled to prove anything. Carefully choose those facts which support your position and hope your audience will not question the validity of the statement. Most anyone today in the public forum trying to convince others of their point of view uses and abuses this truism. It forms the basis of advertising, is the foundation for political rhetoric, becomes the weaponry of any advocacy.

In truth, however, when two or more facts are set in relationship to each other interpretation automatically enters. For example: yesterday a lawn was given fertilizer, today it is greener. Conclusion drawn by the advertiser and hopefully by the customer is that the fertilizer made the difference. Perhaps, but the presentation may have neglected to state that it rained yesterday. Yet time and again we are all guilty of accepting such conclusions without questioning.

It is probably too late to re-educate our adult population and so for a time the P.R. gurus will continue to hold sway, but can we not make an effort to educate our young so that their instinct to question could be honed and not dulled as ours has been.

What better way to train young minds than to have regular periods for debating in class - not just as an after school activity for the keen ones. Most any subject being taught can be used as a topic for debate since debating consists to a great extent in trying to find inconsistencies, incomplete information, and verbal bombast in the opponent's presentation. Quickly students would learn to spot the fallacies and half-truths. They would have a valuable tool for life to use in this society whose innovations are rapidly outpacing its moral and ethical standards.

A radical proposal perhaps, especially if one advocates more money to train teachers to conduct debates and thus less for, say, computers. A near heresy! But such a shift in emphasis may just be the balance needed to really educate to-day's young.

There is, however, a danger inherent in such a shift from the computer oriented gathering of facts to the critical questioning of everything. Parents have a tough enough time now holding their own with wilful teenagers. Think what life would become at home if the logic of every adult dictum was questioned by a young debater.

Once Upon a Time

In Canada a land of beauty and great bounty

There was created a brand new Haliburton County.

Over 650 named lakes all with a breeze

A winter season when they all freeze.

Springtime and summer most desire

Fall season coloured leaves like on fire.

Some mixed farming this is nearly through

Plenty of timber to make things new.

Visitors come here to admire
Then a cottage or home they acquire.

Recreation is enjoyed all year long

Live here a short while, you belong.

Once upon a time this seemed far fetched

But now a reality firmly etched.

The pioneer spirit is still alive and well

Where we go from here Lord, time will tell.

When the Lions roar:

Seniors fight losing battle against strong Peterborough kicker

by OLIVER GREER
Special to The Echo

The senior Redhawks suffered their first defeat of the season last week as Peterborough's Adam Scott Lions prevailed 31-6.

At the half Adam Scott held only a 7-0 lead, as the Redhawks' defence shut down the Lions' vaunted running game and the offence moved the ball adequately.

Coach Gary Brohman said he was "pleased with the first half, especially our defence."

As the second half began, however, the Lions' offence started rolling, scoring on three straight possessions.

On their first possession they scored on a 45 yard draw play, followed by a touch down on a 35 yard screen play.

The third time the ball was in their hands they gained 40 yards on a quick pitch pass and then pounded it in from the ten to put the Redhawks down by 28 in less than five minutes.

One of the main problems Haliburton faced was consistently poor field position as the Lions' powerful kicking game pinned the Redhawks in their own end.

"They had the best high school kicker I've ever seen," said coach Brohman.

Although reeling from the Lions' offensive onslaught, the HHSS defence stiffened and Adam Scott could only punt three singles through the end zone for the remainder of the game.

This allowed the Redhawk offense to put together a nice march which was capped by an eight-yard Matt Reid pass to Mike Morissette in the end zone to bring the score to 31-6 Adam Scott at the end of the game.

Middle Linebacker Brent Boldger was coach Brohman's choice for outstanding defensive player of the game with honorable mentions going to Steve Newell, Ian Duncombe and Adam Durkin.

On offense Mike Morissette got the nod for his outstanding running and receiving.

The Senior Redhawks host Thomas A. Stewart Secondary at 1:30 on Friday.

When the Redhawks soar:

Juniors' defence goes a long way in 19-0 win over Adam Scott

by OLIVER GREER
Special to The Echo

The Junior Redhawks continued their winning ways last week with a 19-0 win over a strong Adam Scott Lions team.

"We thought it would be tougher," said coach Bruce Griffiths, but the Redhawks' better preparation and execution paved the way to an easy victory.

Travis Bain opened the scoring with a touchdown on a box cut. Tailback Jamie Doan's powerful running accounted for the Redhawks' next touchdown and over 200 yards of offense.

HHSS's third TD came on a reverse by flanker Mark Hamilton, the first one attempted by the Redhawks this season.

Diego Rico punted one through the end zone for the single point to round out the scoring for the Redhawks.

On the other side of the ball the Redhawks' defense came up big with fumble recoveries and stops near the end zone.

Coach Griffiths named defensive tackle Kyle Robinson, Defensive End Joel Johnson and outside linebacker Matt Brown, all from a Redhawks' defense which handled a strong Lions offense with surprising ease, the game's outstanding players.

The junior Redhawks play second place Thomas A. Stewart at 3:30 on Friday at home in what promises to be an exciting matchup.

SOCCER ACTION:

In Thursday's games against the LCVI Spartans, the seniors battled to a 2-2 tie while the juniors came out on the bottom of the 3-1 score. The Redhawks are in a learning curve, with many young players capitalizing on enthusiasm for the game as they gain invaluable experience on the field.

Turkey shoot nets Thanksgiving dinner for basketball enthusiasts

by MEGAN LANDRY
HHSS Student

Each year, during the week before Thanksgiving, a "Turkey Shoot" is held at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. Students and staff compete in a basketball "fowl shoot" competition.

Champions are declared for junior and senior boys and girls, and staff.

The purpose of the activity is to raise funds for the Student Activity Council and encourage participation and school spirit.

To further encourage participation, the school offers a Thanksgiving turkey as a prize.

The local merchants were very generous in donating these prizes and we had a very successful turnout.

The lucky turkey winners were:

Atom Huskies outshoot the Millbrook Stars 24 to 8, but still end game in a 1 to 1 tie

by ROY BURK

After having two relatively easy games, the OMHA Atom Huskies were looking for a challenge. They found that and more.

Travelling to Millbrook was a lot easier than beating their goalie. The Huskies came out hard and fast but Millbrook scored first with only three and a half minutes left in the first period. The Huskies tried even harder and finally tied the game when Ryan Bottum picked off a clearing shot and banged it off the boards onto Adam Sisson's stick.

The second and third periods were even more frustrating as the Huskies pounded the Stars' goalie with shot after shot. The final outcome was 24 to 8 shots for us but the score was tied.

This past Friday, the young team met a faster and bigger team. Newcastle made the long drive up, determined to give us a good game. The visitors jumped ahead early but the play was end to end with Ian Sachs receiving more shots than the last two games' total. The first ended with Newcastle up 2 to 1. Adam scored for the Huskies with help from Galen Bowman and Scott Lewis.

It looked as if the second period was going to be Newcastle's as they gained a 4 - 1 lead. But then passing started to pay off when Matt Tripp scored from Dylan Metcalfe and Jeff Burk. Two minutes later, Tyler Watson got us within one goal, assisted by Devin Hunter. The second ended with the Stars up 4 - 3.

A rest between periods paid off as the Huskies came on very strong. Within three minutes they scored three unanswered goals. Devin Hunter was assisted by Scott to tie the game. Adam scored with help from Galen and Jeff. Tyler ended the Huskies' scoring, after receiving passes from Devin and Scott. The game was still end to end action and Newcastle made a come-back. With only a minute and forty-three seconds left, they scored the winner. The Huskies were a little disappointed but the coaching staff were quite proud of their commitment and determination.

Golf tournament winner:

Dave Bunker, centre, a Kashagawigamog Lake cottager, was the overall winner of the Haliburton County Echo/County Commercial Printers golf tournament held recently. Presenting the trophy to him are Mike Gunning, left, of County Commercial Printers and Bob Nichol, right, tournament organizer. Bunker also received a television for his victory.

Midget Wolves score three goals to earn a tie against Oshawa

Strong goaltending and a last-minute flurry of goals kept the Central Ontario Wolves Triple A Midgets in the game against Oshawa on October 7.

The Oshawa Generals had stymied all attempts for the Wolves to score until the last eight minutes of the game in Oshawa. Then the Wolves, including a few Highlands players, put on the heat on, scoring the three goals they needed to tie the game.

Wolves point-getters were Steve Moloney with one goal, Daryl Steele with one goal, Trevor Cox with one goal, Jason Zigamanis with two assists, Jamie Plunkett with one assist and Jarrett Rowden with one assist.

Coaches praised the efforts of goaltender Greg Hutchinson.

A new home for Home Support:

Agency now runs its volunteer programs out of Halco Plaza

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Haliburton County Home Support Services represents an often forgotten but vitally important sector of our economy, MPP Chris Hodgson said at Friday's official opening of Home Support's new location.

In the debate over whether a free market economy is better than one supported by government spending, Hodgson said most people are missing the point. Volunteers are a vital component to either way of doing business.

"It's not possible to help people live full lives in their own homes without volunteers," he told the large crowd of Home Support patrons, volunteers and board members. "They are the true heroes of our community."

Through Home Support, 130 volunteers help 400 senior citizens and people with disabilities continue to live in their own homes. This is done through offering services such as volunteer driving, home help, friendly visiting and emergency response, says executive director Donna Pacey.

She joined Hodgson in thanking the volunteers as well as the volunteer board members who help Home Support offer such services.

They also thanked the staff and volunteers who helped with the massive task of moving from Echo Hills Legion Apartments to Halco Plaza, just off Maple Avenue in Haliburton village.

"Three months ago I was a little bit apprehensive but you've done a tremendous job," honorary board chairman Gord Monk said to those who had helped with the move.

When Pacey thanked past president Adele Barnes (volunteer of the year) for packing and unpacking the dozens of boxes, Barnes replied "I'm not done yet."

Monk also thanked Hodgson for his support of the agency, as well as the volunteers. "Without volunteers, where would we be?"

The new location offers the same services, including the drop-in centre. It is in the upper level, next to the optometrist's office.

IT'S OFFICIAL:

Taking part in the ribbon cutting on October 3 were, from left, above: Landlord Lon Duncombe, board president Bob Mitchell, Ministry of Health, long-term care division representative Barry Myers, executive director Donna Pacey, MPP Chris Hodgson, Haliburton County Warden Elva Bates and honorary board president Gord Monk.

MINDEN LIONS HELP OUT: At the official opening of Haliburton County Home Support Services' new location, Minden Lions President Scott Moore was pleased to present $500 to board president Bob Mitchell to help pay for the agency's services.

Healthcare projects nearing completion

NANCY MCGINN
Staff Reporter

The new construction at the Haliburton

Hospital and Hyland Crest nursing home was recently inspected by a different kind of crew.

Various organizations involved with the sites were invited to tour the construction sites to see for themselves the progress of the work and the layout of the plans.

About 30 people gathered together at the Haliburton facility and 15 at Hyland Crest, to walk through the dark corridors and try to visualize walls where there weren't any and to admire the large number of windows and resulting views.

The outdoor patios, balconies, hair salons and dining areas seemed to garner the most interest, along with corner rooms with panoramic views.

Bruce Stienberg, Superintendent of Bradscot Construction, said that the completion date for the Hyland Crest facility was scheduled for late January or early February, and the Haliburton Hospital facility was slated to be nearing completion in mid November.

New YWCA theatre group wants to give young women an artistic voice

by RACHEL CZIFRA

A new program at the Haliburton YWCA gives "complete creative control" to young women aspiring to develop their artistic abilities, said program facilitator Leslie English.

Fun is the underlying element of Inter-Act Girls Theatre. Role playing games, story telling, voice production and expressive movement activities will help the young women identify their strengths and enjoy finding their own voice which can then be expressed in a theatrical presentation.

The outcome would be a performance written, produced, directed, managed and performed by these young women.

Maybe they will create a musical, maybe a satire, or a creative movement dance piece, said English.

Whatever the results, the intention is that it will "give a voice" to their views and thoughts about themselves as women and their roles in society.

English says she has been passionate about theatre since she stepped onto the stage at the age of 13. Twenty-seven years later she is hoping to continue passing on "the fun, excitement, the joy and the knowledge of the things theatre has taught me."

Inter-Act Girls Theatre is a YWCA Women's Resource Centre after-school program for females aged 14 - 19. Sessions start Thursday, October 21 at 4 p.m. until 6 p.m. at the YWCA. Performance date is estimated for March. Please contact the YWCA (457-1942) for further details.

OPP wants to get more involved with teenagers

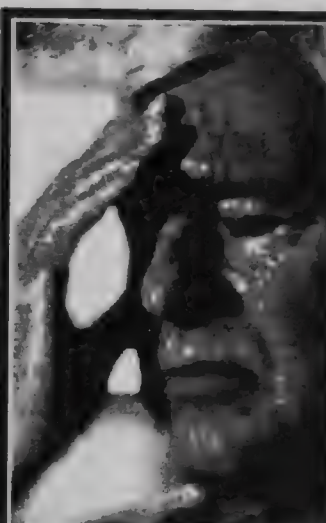

On October 13, officers from the Haliburton Highlands detachment will be celebrating the 90th birthday of the Ontario Provincial Police. Officers from the detachment will be attending the Haliburton secondary school for a lunch hour volleyball game, 11:45 a.m. to 12:45 p.m., followed by birthday cake.

The celebration is also a kick-off for a new program initiated by HHSS's vice principal, Irv Sternberg. The program promotes the formation of a partnership between OPP and students. It is designed to encourage mutual benefits and good citizenship through communication and education.

This program will be further implemented the following week, October 11 to 15, which is designated the "Week Against Violence". Throughout the week the students, teachers, OPP, YWCA, and other community groups, will be taking part in various presentations and activities designed to foster awareness involving the issue of violence.

Both HHSS and the OPP will continue to promote this partnership throughout the school year.

For more information, please contact Irv Sternberg at 705-457-2950 or Provincial Constable Laura Ostler at 705-286-1431.

NANCY MCGINN
Staff Reporter

THE MESSAGE BOARD on the back of Eric McCallum's front door is marked with reminders of appointments and things to do.

Circled in black marker on the top of the board are the words "Black Saturday" and the date November 1, 1997.

That is the day that Mr. McCallum took his wife of 60 years, Mary, into the nursing home for the first time. It's the day he could no longer cope alone with Mary's debilitating Alzheimer's disease.

At the age of 82, McCallum is healthy and alert, maintaining his Ft. Irwin home of 35 years with the help of a cleaning woman sent once a week by the war vets, and doing everything else himself.

Thirty years ago, his wife Mary began acting erratically. Barely noticeable at first, her mood swings were tempered by months at a time when life ran normally. McCallum thought at first that there was something wrong with the relationship and that after years of marriage and five children Mary wanted a divorce.

Subsequent brain scans and tests answered the family's questions yet handed out the grim news that Mary was suffering from either early dementia or Alzheimer's disease. The diagnosis was terminal.

That was seven years ago, and for five years after the diagnosis, McCallum kept his wife at

Eric McCallum's home became a lonely place after his wife, Mary, who has Alzheimers, had to move into Hyland Crest. Today, his hospice companion, Paul Thompson, joins him on visits to see Mary, helping him deal with all the complex emotions such visits always evoke home with him, caring for her in her increasing debilitative state.

After a series of episodes when he was wakened in the night by Mary's nocturnal wanderings, McCallum knew that the ability to safely care for Mary was at an end, and on that black Saturday November 1 two years ago, Mary McCallum became a resident of Hyland Crest nursing home, and Eric was left at home alone after 60 years.

In addition to the loss of his beloved companion, McCallum had a new emotion to deal with, that of an overwhelming sense of guilt. He refers to his "truckload of guilt" as the hardest part of this episode in his life. As Mary's mental clarity faded, so too did it seem the couple's friendships with others.

"I have lost all my friends. I think they are scared of the disease," he says.

There is disappointment in McCallum's voice as he describes how his long-established friends and even family have shied away from either speaking with him or visiting his wife. Even the five children and 27 grandchildren are scarce to nonexistent in terms of showing support. "I'm in a prison here," McCallum says, referring to his home. With the exception of one or two friends who have stuck by him, he was having trouble being alone and coping with his emotions.

One day when McCallum was at Haliburton County Home Support Services, where he volunteers as a driver for clients twice a month, he picked up a pamphlet for Hospice.

The SIRCH Hospice Companion program is a service available to individuals to support them and their families through the challenges of a life-threatening illness or bereavement. Its focus is to provide trained volunteers to assist individuals with emotional support, providing sensitive listening and nonjudgmental discussion.

McCallum called Hospice's number and was immediately contacted by various people at the agency to determine his needs and to show immediate support. He was visited at his home by members of Hospice and was paired with a volunteer who comes to McCallum's home, calls him on the phone at least twice a week, and goes with him to visit Mary at Hyland Crest.

In addition to the volunteer, there are members of the Hospice program who visit Mary on their own, and McCallum says that without them it would have been difficult to cope.

McCallum visits his wife three days a week. It was terribly difficult going to the home alone, and he prefers to go with his volunteer. His days revolve around his visits to his wife, taking his dog Hailey for walks, and still trying to fill the void in his life that his wife's departure has brought.

Paul Thompson is 34 years old and is Mr. McCallum's volunteer. For the purposes of this story, both client and volunteer have agreed to use their names, but both stressed the confidentiality of the Hospice program - in all cases people seeking help can be assured that their names, locations, and illness will be kept confidential.

Despite the difference in their ages, Thompson says he can relate to McCallum's distress, especially as a caregiver. Thompson has devoted himself to the care of his grandmother for the past 10 years, and can offer companionship and the listening skills that he has learned as a volunteer and as a caregiver himself. He knows of the self sacrifice and patience that is involved in caring for and watching a loved one become increasingly disabled, and together they help each other.

Doreen and her husband Jack recently retired to the Highlands after living in Pickering for 28 years. With time on their hands and after

ROOTS GO DEEP:

Paul Thompson and Pat Bain's dedication to SIRCH's hospice program goes beyond helping people cope with life-threatening or debilitating diseases. They recently sold the most flower bulbs as a way of raising $965 for the program. For their efforts, SIRCH board treasurer Kim Burk, right, presented Thompson with a stepping stone made by Wendy Ladurantaye and Bain with a certificate for dinner for two at the Old Country House.

Hospice program makes sure people don't have to feel alone when coping with illness

seeing an ad in the paper calling for volunteers, they both began training for the volunteer program.

The 45-hour course offered invaluable information to the volunteers, says Doreen. It taught them listening skills and how to speak to the dying. She says that her work is 80 percent listening. Hospice volunteers are able to help with funeral arrangements and to help the clients find counsel to execute their wills. They are never allowed to give medication and work hand in hand with other health care professionals and organizations.

A person diagnosed with a terminal illness may not be able to express to a family member how they are feeling, says Doreen, and the volunteers are there to listen and offer comfort and practical support.

As a husband and wife team of volunteers, Doreen and Jack are able to offer a double dose of compassion. They are involved with three clients.

Doreen's family cannot quite understand how their mother could hold the hand of someone until their last breath is taken, yet they think it is a wonderful ability. "Nobody should have to die alone," says Doreen who says that being a volunteer "certainly makes you face your own mortality."

The Hospice volunteer service supports people of all ages, with all types of life threatening illnesses, cancer, AIDS, lung and heart disease, and provides support for the client and families for as long as they need it. It strives to give people who are living with a life-threatening or terminal illness control over decisions that affect them, to keep them in their own homes where possible, and to support family and friends in their role in the caring process.

Eric McCallum sits in his comfortable home surrounded by six decades of family snapshots while his dog Hailey scratches at the door to be let in.

Hailey arrived two years ago, after Mary left to live in the nursing home. And while the dog provides a degree of companionship, the volunteers and staff of the Haliburton County Hospice have provided the level of comfort only other caring, compassionate human beings can bring.

Millennium Dreamers wants to find remarkable young people

Do you know of a young person whose special contribution has made a difference in your community? Perhaps he/she has started a unique fundraiser to help an underprivileged family, collected used books to donate to a local hospital or has found a meaningful way to help senior citizens in your area.

The Millennium Dreamers program, created by McDonald's and Disney, together with UNESCO, is a world-wide search for 2,000 remarkable young people (ages 8 - 15) whose efforts have contributed to their communities. Eighty (80) young Canadians will be chosen to join other award recipients from more than 100 countries around the world at a global youth summit and awards celebration at Walt Disney World Resort in Florida in May, 2000.

• Information is available on the Internet at www.disney.com.

• Canadian nomination forms and official rules are available on the McDonald's web set at www.mcdonalds.com (select 'Millennium Dreamers', then choose 'Canada').

• Beginning October 11, nomination forms and official rules are available at McDonald's restaurants across Canada.

On Stage:

Accordionist Joseph Petric, soprano Maria Thorburn and musician/performer Guy Few will be performing at the October 24 concert.

Celebrating academic and personal Achievement

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

HALIBURTON HIGHLANDS Secondary School students certainly had a lot to be grateful for on Thanksgiving Saturday, when the community lauded some of its best and most dedicated students.

The annual Honours and Awards presentation saw $25,000 in cheques and gifts meted out to students with top marks or an eagerness to learn and contribute to school life.

"There's no better community to live in," said principal Gary Brohman, urging students to "pass the word" about the county's willingness to reward students who do their best.

The following is a list of the various awards.

Local bird enthusiasts invited to participate in Project Feeder Watch

Bird Studies Canada and the Canadian Nature Federation are calling on bird enthusiasts from across the country to help monitor winter birds in Canada.

You can participate in this important bird research – without ever leaving home! – by joining Project Feeder Watch.

Founded in 1976 as the Ontario Bird Feeder Survey, Project FeederWatch now has 14,000 participants across North America. These "FeederWatchers" tell scientists how winter bird populations are growing or declining, and how their continent-wide distributions are changing – information that is crucial to effective bird conservation programs.

It's easy to become a FeederWatcher. Just watch birds at your backyard feeder once every two weeks from November through March. Count the kinds and numbers of birds you see, record the information on FeederWatch data forms, and send the forms back to Bird Studies Canada in the spring for analysis. Or, enter your data through the interactive web page and, at the same time, keep track of everybody's results!

Participating in Project FeederWatch is easy, and for an annual $25 registration fee, participants receive the FeederWatch instruction booklet, resource manual, data forms, a beautiful bird calendar, a poster of common feeder birds, and three issues of the newsletter BirdWatch Canada, as well as the Bird Studies Canada Annual Report.

Bird Studies Canada is an independent, non-profit research institute studying birds and their habitats for conservation.

Make the winter months a lot more fun by watching birds at your feeder, and turn a backyard hobby into valuable conservation research by joining Project FeederWatch. To register, call Bird Studies Canada toll-free at 1-888-448-BIRD (2473), or write to P.O. Box 160, Port Rowan, Ontario N0E 1M0, or E-mail at pfw@bsc-eoc.org.

Learning program joins forces with Haliburton's adult education centre

The Haliburton Highlands Learning Program is moving to a permanent home in the new Highlands Community Learning Centre.

Now all levels of adult education will be offered from one site.

The HCLC will be in the former Victoria Street Public School, and it will offer opportunities to anyone wishing to improve their academic situation.

The HHLP will be located on the top floor with a large classroom and office next to it. The rooms will be divided into various work areas.

Student/tutor matches will continue to meet throughout the county while the coordination and tutoring areas will be available at the centre.

The focus remains the same: supporting students with their work on basic reading, writing, arithmetic and computer skills. The program is successful through the personal encouragement and attention of our tutors.

As a result of this combined services site, students can move along to other levels while staying in the same place.

Sir Sandford Fleming College has moved its upgrading program to the middle floor of the same building where students prepare for work, further training or apprenticeship.

On the ground level Trillium Lakelands offers a new credit program for Grades 11 and 12.

The beauty is that there's a single entry point to all people wishing to upgrade.

The change is like a growth spurt that provides easy transition for our students to other levels of upgrading and credit course. Our learners will be able to see their learning in a continuum and experience the energy that a busy site represents," says HHLC's coordinator, Jane Selbie.

"The other programs will benefit by the enthusiasm, flexibility and creativity that is the secret to making small and big steps in the lives of our students through our very special Haliburton Highlands Learning Program volunteers."

An assessment will determine which program is suited to people's specific needs and abilities.

An open house is being planned for late October. Watch for announcements and come to celebrate this wonderful new centre available to adult learners in the county.

HCSA leads the way in Ontario snowmobile club competition

Trails & Tours Talk

by Barrie Martin

Association Accolades

The Haliburton County Snowmobile Association has done it again. At a recent conference of the Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs, the HCSA received several awards including the Best Club Newspaper in the province; top honours for Best Safety Program - Yamaha Safety Award; and runner-up for the Labatt's Safety Award. Peter Overington won provincial recognition for his work as an Administrative Volunteer. Congratulations HCSA!

Haliburton Rocks

Calling all hard rock enthusiasts! Haliburton is rich in geological resources and it is time we flaunted it. Consider the mineral deposits throughout the county, the highway rock cuts, the rock shops, the resident geologists and hobbyists, the lapidary room at the Frost Centre and the earth science profile in the new elementary school curriculum. Haliburton County has the makings of a Geology Tour. Such a road tour has potential to bring visitors to the area during the spring and fall months. The Haliburton Highlands Trails and Tours Network would like to hear from anyone interested in getting together with others of like mind to explore the possibilities of developing a geology tour. Please contact Jan Warfield at 705-286-2410 or jan.warfield @sympatico.ca. Rock on!

Get On Board

The new Board of Directors for the Haliburton Highlands Trails and Tours Network got on with business at their inaugural meeting on September 22. Much of the meeting was spent getting acquainted and informing the Directors about the progress that has been made to date by HHTN. The formation of the Board is a critical turning point. The Board broadens the base of support for the Network and will help it realize its full potential and meet community expectations. The Board will help insure returns on the investments made to date by taxpayers - the 1995 Haliburton County Trails and Tours Network Strategy and recent grants from federal, provincial, and municipal sources. The Board meetings are open to anyone to observe or to make proposals. The next meeting is scheduled for October 14, 7 p.m. at the MNR office in Minden.

Look for our new membership brochure. As a member you will receive a quarterly newsletter, discounts on T-shirts, maps and other future products and events, and a vote at the annual general meeting. There will be opportunities to participate in projects and work with like-minded trails and tours enthusiasts. Organizational and business memberships will soon be available. Donations are always welcome.

A New Path

Jan Warfield, our Trails and Tours Coordinator, has taken a few days off to hike the bridal path. She is getting married to Scott Thomas who works as the Assistant Superintendent at Massasauga Provincial Park. Congratulations Jan and Scott!
